SYCAMORE

Chill winds drain the summer's gold.
Washed by rain, bleached by cold,
The drab hill breeds mists of gray.
Last year's weeds are palest hay.

The warmest tint of winter sun,
The whispered hint of cinnamon,
In sycamore leaves, daylight tones
Among the tree's silvered bones.

In the public interest

by ralph nader

In the category of things that have been taken for granted for too long, try the U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO). For years millions of Americans have ordered or used the numerous pamphlets, reports, hearings and other government documents, led by the all-time government best seller — "Infant Care."

"Infant Care" sold for 20 cents until a few years ago. Now it is going for a $1.00. Another widely distributed advisory, "Prenatal Care," went from 20 cents in 1972 to the present $1.05. Subscriptions to the Congressional Record, the Federal Register, or monthly journals have more than doubled in the same period.

GPO officials point to paper costs, postage increases and other inflationary pressures. But there is more to the problem than the usual "pass the buck" excuses so similar to the contemporary rationalizations of corporations.

GPO never has clearly developed a comprehensive policy to present to Congress so that its role can be shaped in the best interests of providing needed information cheaply to citizens. As a result it is wrung to and fro by congressional politics, special interests and its own fluctuating timidity.

Presently, under congressional requirement, more and more of the printing is being contracted to private printers, reversing a practice of in-house printing started by President Abraham Lincoln. In 1969, GPO's own presses did 57 percent of its printing jobs; now it is down to 39 percent. A General Accounting Office (GAO) report released December 9 noted it would be considerably more economical to reorganize government printing at central GPO plants.

The GPO's pricing policy suffers from several contradictions. By law the Superintendent of Documents is supposed to make publications available at cost plus 50 percent. Yet Congress has often asked the printing office to distribute materials free. Year after year, most government documents are distributed "free" to citizens who know whom to ask (such as their member of Congress) or other government agencies for internal or public distribution. Estimates indicated no more than 15 percent of all government documents are sold.

The federal government always has paid more than 90 percent of total GPO costs anyway. In 1973, sales brought in about $30 million (losing $17 million) out of a total GPO cost of $321.3 million.

These facts raise the question of why government publications aren't totally subsidized to encourage farmers, consumers, the elderly, students and others to make use of these materials. Given a number of major economies which could be instituted with a heads-up public service philosophy, GPO could regain its pride and begin focusing its energies on its information mission.

Regularly, GPO sells for destruction (at about $30 a ton) publications which are not selling briskly because most people don't know about them. In 1971 a Senate Small Business staff economist informed me that GPO had destroyed over 2,000 copies of a new classic hearing compendium on the automobile industry that was printed only 2½ years earlier.

There is need for a vastly improved GPO. Citizens interested in working toward that goal can send their suggestions and information to my associate, Frank Warner, P.O. Box 19312, Washington, DC 20036.

CVPOA candidates speak out

Ballots were scheduled to be mailed this week to members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association for their election of officers and a board of directors. Members are given two weeks to return the ballots, election chairman Oliver White says.

Eight candidates have been named to seek four seats on the board of directors, the organization's policy making branch. Statements issued by each candidate on their views for distribution to voters follow:

John Broberg: An incumbent, Broberg is a retired news editor who "feels Carmel Valley has already reached saturation growth in view of tremendous threats posed by air pollution, sewage disposal and potential water shortages, and who dreams of installing a drawbridge and moat at Farm Center, manned by cross-bowmen.

William Brown: Outgoing president of CVPOA, served two terms.

Hannah Davidson: "I should like to see the CVPOA: Adopt a committee structure to study specific problems with reports to the full board at regular intervals; adopt a policy requiring no fewer than two board members attend every meeting or hearing affecting Carmel Valley; create a CVPOA Alert Bulletin listing time, place and subject matter of above mentioned hearings or meetings; provide a speakers' bureau to address groups on subjects of concern to valley residents."

Robert Evans: An independent small businessman, he is past president of the Carmel Knolls Property Owners' Assn. and is Peninsula District Scouting chairman. Married, he has two children under 10. Evans is "In favor of fair and reasonable solutions to Carmel Valley problems, provided the special quality of life sought by the majority of residents is maintained."

David Hudson: A graduate of Carmel High School, he is self-employed, specializing in real estate appraisal and commercial mortgage loan brokerage. Hudson believes he could "act as a balance on the CVPOA, which basically has a no-growth philosophy." Although raised a land conservationist, he feels "no-growth can be as hazardous as over-development."

Slator Miller: Also an incumbent, he is a retired executive from the Hawaiian sugar industry and a member of the board of directors of the Del Mesa Community Assn. He is "a firm supporter of efforts to maintain the beauty and the character of Carmel Valley and believes the Monterey Peninsula and the Carmel Valley to be a superb area unique in its many attractions, but now endangered by the force of indiscriminant development."

Ginnie Drew Murphy: "We have been most fortunate that Carmel Valley has not boomed to the extent predicted in the 60s. But as the influx of people to this area increases we have to be even more careful to maintain our protective zoning and be circumspect about allowing changes in minimum building sites and/or uses of the land. I would like to see more younger and newer residents of the valley involved in the CVPOA. We've seen the same faces in Salinas for too many years. We need the impact of new and concerned homeowners."

Christopher Spaulding: "As a Carmel Valley resident for six years, I have seen good and bad land development come to the Valley. Growth and progress cannot be eliminated, but can be controlled and zoned so that it may progress in a harmonious relationship with the character and environment of the Valley."

Election results will be announced at the quarterly meeting of the CVPOA Jan. 29.

from our readers' point of view

Dear Editor:

It is not "Us, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union," etc. it is "We, the people of the United States, etc."

It was in this context that I used the phrase: We, the people in the letter to the editor published in your 19 December Carmel Valley Outlook. Because I was writing about government, specifically self-government, I blithely assumed any reader would know where my head was. So I apologize for not putting the phrase in quotes, as it should have been, and misleading you into thinking I had committed a grammatical error.

Evelyn Nolt
Carmel Valley

Dear Editor:

Monterey Savings is so community-minded that I am amazed they would put the flashing lights showing temperature and time at their new office in the Valley.

We don't want flashing lights. We want to drive down the Valley and see homes, fields, and trees. They may think we need to know the time and temperature, but we don't want to be reminded of big cities. People who live in the Valley have learned to live with time and temperatures, so please take it out.

Wood returns salary check

Dear Editor:

Enclosed is a copy of a letter I have sent to Gov. Brown along with my returned Assembly salary check.

Even though I am not a political candidate for any office, I would not want the people in your valley to think I ever accepted a salary check that was not earned or was not legitimately mine.

Bob Wood

Controller Kenneth Cory

Gentlemen:

As you both know, due to a peculiar quirk in the law, the state legislators who were defeated, retired, or whose district was taken away from them due to reapportionment were deemed legally eligible to receive a salary check for the month of December, 1974, although our official duties ended on November 30, 1974.

Yesterday, I received my Assembly salary check for the month of December for duties I did not perform. I am taking the liberty of returning this check back to the State unendorsed. I do not feel that this check is rightfully mine.

Although I may be mistaken, I think I am the only man in the above category who was fortunate enough to be re-employed on December first by the State of California in another department (other than the Legislature) and I have received my regular December check for duties carried out in this new position.

I feel it would be morally wrong and unfair to the tax-paying public to accept two State checks. I personally feel that the large majority of the Legislators, had they found themselves under similar conditions, would have responded in the same manner.

Response registered about dogs

From Marvin C. Pylate, Hitchcock Canyon:

I have two kids, two dogs and two acres in Hitchcock Canyon. At my property line, my right and the right of my kids and my dogs to destroy, damage, or in any way bother other people stops.

I want it known also that at that property line, the right of anyone else or their kids or their dogs to destroy, damage, or in any way bother me or mine stops. I will take any steps necessary to see that this is so. I won't worry about legal consequences since I am familiar with the laws of trespass and the California Livestock Laws. After all, there is supposedly a county leash law.

If I see a donkey with a hang-nail, or a deer in distress, I will call the SPCA. If I have to shoot someone's dog, I'll call the Sheriff's office. The SPCA I support by choice; the Sheriff's office I support by taxation.

The Board of Supervisors, in their infinite wisdom, passed the animal control ordinance. The Sheriff, if he has time between signing bank deposits and endorsing checks, is charged with enforcing that ordinance. I expect him to start doing so.

This dog situation is causing some pretty hard feelings and some dogs have been shot. When guns and hard feelings get mixed together, something beside dogs is liable to get hurt. Let's get something started to stop the situation from getting out of hand.

From Fran Libby, Hitchcock Canyon:

I'm tired of dogs running on my land, chasing my animals and killing my chickens and ducks. I pay taxes. What (do I do this) for, if the laws are not to be enforced? I know the dogs. The owners know the dogs. They have caused damage for a long, long time.

The sheriff says, "Shoot them dead." The Poundmaster says, "Catch them and I'll pick them up." And he gives them back, for $10, the next day. A lot of good that does me-- or my dead animals.

Why is it so important for these owners to have killer dogs? I really don't want to kill one of them. It's not the dog's fault. Dogs are like people: If they don't have anything to do, they'll make something to do.

My neighbors and I have been tormented by dogs long enough. We've lost some good animal friends to these brutes. Today I've called the D.A. and the Fourth District Supervisor. They'll work on the problem and call me next week. I hope my animals understand and can wait. I only hope my trigger finger can also.

From Laura M. Wolf, 3 Lower Circle:

My complaints run all the way from having a child of mine attacked in the village by an unleashed dog and her arm bitten through and broken as she was dragged off, to being awaked at all hours of the night by choruses of barking.

In between come other minor bites and scares by loose dogs, dog fights in the midst of children waiting for the school bus, a dog pack that once ran loose on my street killing other small dogs, dogs who chase cars, dogs who dig holes in my garden and damage my plants, garbage can raids, and having to constantly shovel up piles of dog--- (Do you know a polite name for it?) in my yard. I could go on and on.

Most owners of free-running dogs refuse to admit their animal is a problem to anyone else, yet every single one has been involved in one or more of the incidents I mentioned.

As far as I am concerned, these owners care neither for their animals or their neighbors' rights. I have removed a dead dog from the road after it had been run over. I have seen owners who repeatedly pay vet bills for their dogs injured by automobiles or other animals and still do not take steps to protect them.

I see no solution until the owners take responsibility for all their animals and I seriously doubt this will ever happen. When you ask how I feel, I'm discouraged and bitter about the problem.

Incidentally, I like animals and I own half a dog I care for lovingly in my home on a part-time basis. As Mrs. May stated in your article, the problem is not the fault of the dogs, but the fault of the owners.

From a Hitchcock Canyon resident:

Leslie Johnson's timely report on the dog situation in Carmel Valley was excellent. Hopefully, it will prod the powers-that-be to take prompt and appropriate action.

The urgency of authoritative action against owners of vicious animals who allow these beasts to roam free was brought home to us in a frightening manner the Sunday following publication of Ms. Johnson's article.

My son's dog, Carlos, was in my care for a brief time during the holiday season. He was tied in the garage, and the garage door was open so that he could enjoy the air and see what was going on. Suddenly, the sound of angry growling brought us on the run to the garage where we found a neighbor's huge dog attacking Carlos. Mind you, this dog came from some distance and entered our garage to attack another animal. Our screams sent him running but not before his fangs had punctured Carlos' ear several times.

Only our presence saved Carlos from being seriously injured, perhaps killed. Had we not been home, the attack would have proceeded until -- well, it's too ugly to contemplate.

No one wants to deprive anyone of his pet, but neither does anyone want his own pets mutilated by dogs who wander without any restraints. Some of these dogs, perhaps most of them, have tasted blood, and there will be no stopping them. Let's do something NOW. The situation already is out of control. I, for one, will shoot the next dog that comes on our property uninvited.

Code supports shooting animals in property defense

Although the Carmel Valley Outlook is not a legal authority, since several respondents mentioned shooting animals trespassing on their property, we would quote one section of the California Agricultural Code, Chapter 5, Article 1, Paragraph 31102:

"...Any person may kill any dog in any of the following cases:

(a) The dog is found in the act of killing, wounding, or persistently pursuing or worrying livestock or poultry on land or premises which are not owned or possessed by the owner of the dog.

(b) The person has such proof as conclusively shows that the dog has been recently engaged in killing or wounding livestock or poultry on land or premises which are not owned or possessed by the dog's owner.

No action, civil or criminal, shall be maintained for the killing of any such dog."

Home for the holidays Salsipuedes gift exchange

Cocktail and a buffet, "a party to show appreciation to the workmen who helped make my home a thing of beauty," were an event on Sunday hosted by Mrs. Philip Walker. It was a rare time when those involved in the construction and their wives had an opportunity to return and enjoy their workmanship.

When Kathryn's Flight Road home was destroyed last summer by an early morning fire, few dreamed she would rebuild in time to have invitations in the mail for her traditional Christmas party.

With workmen on the job until 11 p.m. the night before the guests arrived, the miracle did occur and 84 friends enjoyed cocktails and buffet in the midst of a dazzling display of holiday decor. True, some of the treasured ornaments were smoky (Kathryn even topped one tree with a "naughty angel" who survived the fire), but the effect was sensational.

There were four Christmas trees: One built as an espalier in the bookcase; a jewel tree; a gold tree; and a traditional green and red tree. The new lanai was banked with poinsettias, azaleas and orchids. There was even a handsome Christmas cactus which a friend had received as a tiny prize at a long ago card party of Kathryn's, cared for and returned mature and blooming.

The recently remodeled and rebuilt home was the scene of another party New Year's Day when members of the congregation from St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church showered Kathryn with everything from glassware to a broom!

Gold country tour

A tour of the Gold Country (Highway 49 from Placerville north) gave Poppy Road residents, Marian and Jon Englund and sons, Brent and Curtis, a snowy insight into California's historic past.

The foursome embarked on their trip after sharing the holidays with Jon's mother, Mrs. Adele Marinez of Sacramento, his brothers Randy and Chris Englund of San Diego, and Marian's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Privetts and daughter, Elizabeth, her grandmother, Mrs. William Soloman, and her aunt, Mrs. Letha Sims, all of Vista.

Hutchinsons' houseguests

Dr. and Mrs. Joe Hutchinson of Country Club Drive welcomed their daughter, Junie home for the Christmas vacation from classes at Pitzer in Claremont where she is a freshman majoring in psychology. Also a houseguest during the holidays was their nephew, Michael Ryals of San Diego.

Mrs. Franklin celebrates

Mrs. J.B. (Vierena) Franklin, a long-time resident of Flight Road, now a resident-patient at Skyline Convalescent Hospital marked her 96th birthday on December 31.

Her son, Arthur Franklin, who flew down from his home in Sitka, Ala. for the occasion, was among the guests at a New Year's Eve dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Heckenlaible.

Adding their welcome to 1975 were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Naslund, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Heckenlaible, and Don Jensen, all of the Valley. Jackie Heckenlaible's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John De Mello of LeMoore; and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson and daughters, Sara and Mari of Pacific Grove.

Card parties resume

The monthly benefit bridge and canasta card parties sponsored by the St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church will begin again on January 29th at 12:30 p.m. at Mrs. Philip Walker's home on Flight Road.

Ladies who enjoy cards are invited to make up a table and phone individual or table reservations to Mrs. Walker 659-2280.

A mixture of young and old friends who have met for the last ten years during the holiday season on Salsipuedes at the home of Mrs. Bettie O'Neal to honor Doris Andersen and her son, Roger, were there again this year to exchange greetings, gifts, and share a potluck dinner. Playing his traditional role of Santa Claus was Roger Andersen.

Bettie's daughter, Molly, was home from San Francisco; her son, John and his wife, Mary were home from Fullerton; and Terry and Beau Kvenild came down from Santa Cruz.

Also attending were Virginia Adadow, Evelyn and Al Parker, Barbara Budinger, Steve Antoncich, Lee and Johnny Andersen, Fracie Foley, Barbara and Will Fay, Sue Putnam, Andrea Andersen, and Kit Parker.

It was the first party missed over the years by Betty and Mike Antoncich, who joined them via along distance phone call from Seattle, Wash.

Ohio wedding

The first wedding ceremony to be performed at the Friends Church in Baltic Ohio, united in marriage a well-known Valley resident, Mary Elizabeth (Beth) Hitchcock and Ralph Warren Morrow. The couple had been in attendance at the first service held three weeks ago in the brand new building of the old Quaker Church.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. James (Vivian) Baker, of Beaver, Penn. The bridegroom's brother, Glenn Morrow of Piqua, Ohio, served as his best man.

For the double ring rites which took place at 2:30 p.m. on January 4th, the bride selected an empire gown of powder blue with long sleeves and a V neckline.

For "something old," she carried an heirloom handkerchief, embroidered under a microscope over 100 years ago by a great-aunt. She borrowed a blue garter from a friend in Indianapolis, wore a blue sapphire locket, and had a lucky sixpence for her shoe.

The Rev. Homer Kandel officiated at the happy occasion attended by 19 members of their families and close friends.

Following a wedding dinner at an Amish restaurant, the couple left for a honeymoon to an undisclosed destination. They will return in November to make Carmel Valley their home following Mr. Morrow's retirement from Val Decker Packing Company. They are presently residing at 902 Grant Street in Piqua, Ohio.

The new Mrs. Morrow has been a Valley resident for 18 years and formerly owned the Adobe Oaks Motel. She has been active in many civic affairs including the Carmel Valley Garden Association, the CV Lionettes, CV Community Youth Center, and the Community Hospital Pink Ladies. Her many friends wish her every happiness and a speedy return to California.

Grandfathers visit

Two grandfathers shared the holiday festivities with Katie, Annee, Regan, and Garth at the James Ijams residence in Robles Del Rio. Jay Crusey arrived from Santa Paula and William Ijams Sr. flew home from Mechew, Tigre Province, Ethiopia.

Ijams is with the Peace Corps and mans a village orphanage with 26 young charges between 5 and 16 years of age.

His gift to his daughter-in-law, Shirley, was a caftan made by the ladies of the village whom he accompanied to the market place to select the cotton which they spun into the thread for weaving the material for the lovely garment.

Also home for the holidays was the Ijams daughter, Robyn and husband Dave Stech of Apply Valley.

The main purpose of the Retailers' Assn. is to work with the state assembly and senate on legislation affecting retailers in California.

Grand opera at Hidden Valley

The Hidden Valley Music Seminars announced this week their upcoming production of Mozart's opera "Don Giovanni" to be presented in the campus theatre on January 25, 26, 31, February 1, and 2.

The musical direction of "Don Giovanni" is in the hands of pianist-conductor Randall Bare. A former accompanist and assistant conductor for the music seminars, Bare has gained considerable recognition both for his conducting and for his superb concerto performances with the music seminar orchestra.

Stage director for "Don Giovanni" will be Robert Darling, a professional designer-director. Darling received his M.F.A. from the Yale University School of Drama, studied with the Bayreuth Festspiel Meisterklasse in Bayreuth, Germany, served on the faculty of Stanford University, and received high critical acclaim for his work with the San Francisco Opera Company, the Lyric Opera of Chicago, Santa Fe Opera, the San Francisco Ballet, and with the opera companies of Vancouver, San Diego, Anchorage, Denver, and Kansas City.

Darling's enthusiasm for this project is evidenced in his feeling that "We have an opportunity here to present opera in an intimate setting where we can rely on the music, the acting ability of the singers, and the classic story of Don Juan to make this a most meaningful and exciting experience for the audience."

"Don Giovanni" is being done as a joint venture of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars and the Monterey Peninsula College insofar as the College is making it possible for members of the community to attend the opera performances as participants in an Opera Institute. No tickets will be sold for the performances because of the college's involvement; however, a $3.50 tuition will be charged. Reservations for the opera will be limited to 200 per performance. Reservations will be honored in the order in which they are received by the Carmel Valley office of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars, 659-3115.

A unique aspect of this presentation of Don Giovanni is that it will be produced "in the round." Audience members will sit almost entirely around the stage and orchestra and will be within touching distance of the performers.

The featured performers include: as Don Giovanni, baritone John Giger from the University of the Pacific; as Donna Anna, Susan Gorennyuke, recently returned from appearances with the Lucerne Opera; as Elvira, Marilyn Coles, recording soloist with Deutsche Grammophon and newly signed member of the Oldenburg Opera in Germany.

Singing the role of Zerlina will be the local soprano Kazuko Hara, whose studies include work at the Tokyo University of Art and the famous Vienna Academy. Also representing the local area is Alexander Holodiloff, bass singer, whose occupation is as a member of the faculty at the Defense Language Institute.

Hidden Valley and MPC will be offering a series of three-hour study sessions to acquaint local people with the opera, its problems of production, its history, and some of the writings and commentaries concerning it. Anyone interested in participating in these study sessions which will be held both in the morning and in the evening at various times throughout the next three weeks, should telephone the Hidden Valley offices.

Susan Gorennyuke will portray Donna Anna and Peter Van Derick will sing the role of Ohavio when Hidden Valley presents "Don Giovanni" later this month.

CVPOA board votes against dam

Support by the CVPOA for no multipurpose dam on the Carmel River was voiced Wednesday night at the board of directors meeting, when they voted to support Alternative 5 of the Corps of Engineers flood control plan.

Alternative 5 entails flood plain zoning and flood plain insurance, with no structural measures involved. The board's letter points out that such measures will be forced upon county residents by the Federal Disaster Act of 1973, and noted their intention to separate flood control and water supply issues.

Outgoing President Bill Brown told the board in connection with the decision that Nancy Strathmeyer, a local real estate manager, is seeking aid in compiling a more accurate report on the 1967 flood than the corps used in their most recent presentation.

The board of directors is also seeking input from the membership of the CVPOA for the general meeting at 8 p.m. on Jan. 29 in the Redwood Room of Del Mesa Carmel.

Fifth District Supervisor Robert Bolman will be present to answer questions from CVPOA members, but will answer only those questions received by him in writing 10 days in advance of the meeting. Brown said he would put together all the questions for Bolman, if written queries were sent to him at 27175 Meadows Rd., Carmel. The board decided to photostat all questions received prior to the meeting.

In other action, the board voted to support a slope density formula on one unit per 2.5 acres on any land with more than 30 degree slope. They did not take formal action on other amendments to the county zoning ordinance which will face public hearing Jan. 29 before the planning commission.

The board directed Brown to continue compilation of a list of developments and units allowed to be constructed through loopholes in the PUC's interim order against California American Water Co. It will be included in a formal statement to the PUC for continuance of the order and a tightening of some of the gaps.

The board also discussed the Monterey Savings and Loan Assn. time and temperature sign at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center, but took no action on the matter.

Several pieces of business, including the appointment of a corresponding secretary, were tabled until a new board is elected and in office. The new board was directed to name a small committee to meet with certain residents of Del Mesa Carmel and work out a compromise on endorsement of development of Roach Canyon as a passive park.

Montessori method encourages independence

By GRACE DONAHUE

Dr. Maria Montessori's contributions to education are comparable to the contributions made to art by the Old Masters. That her legacy is available to the few rather than the many does not diminish its excellence.

Imagine, if you can, a 2½ year old reading. Or a three year old lisp an algebraic concept. Or a four year old diagramming a sentence. No, these are not exceptionally gifted children -- they are students at the Carmel Valley Montessori School, a pre-school addition to Maria Montessori's schools throughout the world.

Mrs. Barbara Khentigan, a slim, blonde woman, founded the Carmel Valley Montessori School in November. Once a home, the attractive building on Carmel Valley Road became a privately-owned pre-school, and now a Montessori center of learning for the very young. Mrs. Khentigan came to the Montessori teaching method because of her great dissatisfaction with the education her son, now 19, received from the public system.

"I saw Frank, my son, go through the public school system and felt, at the time, that there had to be another alternative," she said. An avid reader, Mrs. Khentigan one day picked up a book entitled Maria Montessori, Her Life and Her Work. "That did it," she smiled. "Half way through, I knew this was what I wanted to do with my life."

As soon as she could, Barbara Khentigan, with husband, Archie, giving full support, attended the Montessori Institute of Los Angeles where for nine months she was trained in the Montessori method.

"It was a very intensive nine months," she recalled. "During that time, each prospective teacher was required to compose and illustrate seven books on the Montessori system."

Mrs. Khentigan placed a loose leaf binder -- filled to capacity -- on one of the tables. In it were 87 typewritten pages, and at least an equal number of carefully executed illustrations encased in clear plastic page-protectors.

"There are six more like this," she said. Deftly turning the pages, she briefly explained how the Montessori method works.

"Pre-school children are very quick to learn," Mrs. Khentigan said. "We underestimate them. For example, why does a child learn to speak the language his or her parents speak? They are exposed to dozens of sounds, yet somehow they know that in order to communicate, they must emulate their parents' voices."

Maria Montessori's own experience gave her the insight to develop her highly successful method of instruction. She was the first woman physician in Italy, but because of sexual discrimination, she was unable to find work. Ironically, her misfortune at being unable to follow her chosen profession has been the great good fortune of thousands of children in subsequent generations.

Dr. Montessori finally found a position working with retarded children. She observed that they were motivated by movement and by touch, and she worked diligently to develop apparatus designed to enhance these senses. Later, she was put in charge of what now would be called a day care center for children of illiterate factory workers. Until she arrived, these children were left to their own devices while their parents worked. Dr. Montessori brought with her the apparatus she had used with the retarded youngsters, and found that these mentally normal children not only grasped it, but also found new adventures in learning. Her success from this limited experimentation stimulated her to work with more and more teaching equipment of her own design, until, finally, she developed what was destined to become a world famous and revolutionary system of education.

"Dr. Montessori came to the United States in 1915 and held a classroom at the San Francisco World Exposition," Mrs. Khentigan said. "She later was interned in India during the subsequent war because of her Italian citizenship, and after the war, she settled in Holland."

Dr. Montessori died in her adopted land in 1952, but the Association of Montessori Internationale, headquartered in Holland, continues under the leadership of Mario Montessori, Maria's son, who carries on his mother's work.

When Mrs. Khentigan, a New Yorker by birth, started looking for a school and found the present site, she brought with her the total philosophy of education she had gained from her Montessori instruction.

"The development of the entire person of the child is spiritual, intellectual, physical, emotional and social," she said. "Maria Montessori said that 'childhood is humanity's fresh start.' We believe the child needs, for his or her wholesome personal growth, an environment of love, trustful respect, peace, understanding and security."

"I have seven children enrolled on half day sessions. We have the capacity for seventeen full time or 34 half time students."

The children now enrolled range from 2.9 to 4.9 years of age, and several younger children now are being considered.

The physical plant is bright and cheerful. Located on 1.18 acres of land, it consists of two large rooms at either end of the building, with an office, rainy day room and bathrooms separating the two larger rooms. Presently, classes are held in one room but, as the school expands, both will be used.

The yellow vinyl floor in the classroom would brighten the most dour personality. Seven small vinyl aprons -- the same buttery color as the floor -- hang neatly on a hanger in the corner, awaiting use by their small owners. Child-sized tables with matching chairs are scattered throughout the spacious room and are either natural wood or painted in bright, appealing colors. A small mirror, framed in bright green, hangs child-height on the wall, a small box at its base, and a chair in front. Here, grooming is taught, and each child combs his hair in front of the mirror, placing the used comb in the box where, later in the day, Mrs. Khentigan picks them up and washes them for the next day.

The back wall overlooking the garden is glass, and brings the feel of nature into the classroom. Nature is a vital part of the instruction at Mrs. Khentigan's school, as she believes children should learn to relate happily to their environment. Many species of plants are placed artistically throughout the school and the children water them and care for them, learning both their popular and Latin names.

Shelves line the two side walls of the room, and on these shelves are the learning materials which are taken from and replaced on the shelves as the children use and finish using them.

A small recessed area contains trays and glasses. At snack time, each child pours his own juice, puts a napkin and a cookie on his own small tray, takes it to a table and sits to enjoy the snack in happy camaraderie with his fellow students.

"They also are able to crack nuts and serve them, and they can cut simple fruits, like bananas, although some oc-asionally forget to share and eat the entire banana," Mrs. Khentigan said.

"Respect is essential to learning, and 'please' and 'thank you' are rudimentary aspects of respect," Mrs. Khentigan noted, adding that many parents are learning to offer their children the same courtesies that they are being given by these small people.

"We have respect for the child. If we make a mistake in front of the child, we say 'excuse me.' We accord the children the same respect we give to adults. We encourage them to verbalize their feelings so that rather than cry over something, a child will explain why he or she feels hurt."

The Montessori system operates in a social environment -- work is shared.

"If a child is working on something that another child wants, he asks permission. The choice of whether or not to let the second child share -- and most usually they do share -- is up to the child who is doing that particular thing."

Mrs. Khentigan said that the pre-school Montessori child can "get as far as fractions and long division," in his mathematical studies. In other systems, the student usually does not learn these mathematical systems until the fourth grade. In grammar, pre-schoolers will be able to advance as far as diagramming sentences.

"The Montessori system does not deal in abstracts, we deal in concretes," Mrs. Khentigan explained as she placed several wooden forms on the table. Painted bright blue, the forms were shaped as cylinders, cubes, spheres, triangles, rectangles and pyramids, "elipsoid and ovoid shapes."

"It's really fascinating to hear a small child say, 'rectangular prism,'" she grinned.

Colors are taught through the medium of small laquered tablets. First, the child learns the primary colors, later the tertiary colors.

The alphabet is learned through the use of sandpaper letters. The child uses the first two fingers (the "writing" fingers) to trace the sandpaper letters. He learns the sound of the letter rather than its name.

"This provides muscular memory, and when the time comes for the child to write, the muscular memory cooperates," Mrs. Khentigan explained.

The Montessori learning material is related to the child much like the playing of a happy game. Textures, for example, require that one child be blindfolded as if playing Blind Man's Bluff, while another child gives him squares of material. The blindfolded child, using his sense of touch, attempts to identify two pieces which are exactly alike.

Parts of speech are illustrated. "We don't give a verb, say, a formal definition because it means nothing to the child. We tell the child that a verb is an action word. Then he is able to associate. He knows what it is to run, or to eat, or to play."

Mrs. Khentigan explained many of the attractive learning tools used in the Montessori method. All are the infinitely thoughtful products of Maria Montessori's mind, prepared in Holland for use in Montessori schools throughout the world.

"Dr. Montessori believed that anyone properly taught needs no further academic instruction beyond age 12. After that, she believed that children need work experience."

Turning to a bright mobile which hung over the window, Mrs. Khentigan said, "One of the 2.9 year olds made that. He worked laboriously over it, and when he had completed it, we hung it for him. He laughed with such joy that I want him to make the next one soon so I can hear him laugh like that again."

The final organizational meeting of the Monterey Vanqueros, Corral 85 of Equestrian Trails International, took place at the Carmel Valley Community Center December 10.

Plans were formulated to make this a trail riding club having at least one organized trail ride per month. Many of the members are also interested in acquisition of new trails and preservation of old ones for area riders and hikers.

Victor Farr, who has been a prime motivator in getting this chapter of ETI organized, was elected the first president of the new corral. Vic and his wife Speedie are well known in the 9,000 member ETI organization. Speedie was a director of Area 5 for several years when the couple lived in Southern California and Vic is a past president of Corral 9. In fact, Vic and Speedie have been trail riding so many years together they've had time to become great-grandparents.

Vice-president is Armand Normandin, another ETI old hand. He was a member of Corral 20 when he owned a popular riding stable at Hansen Dam. Now he and his family own Double A Stable on Jack's Peak.

Secretary is Emylyn Rogers of Prunedale. Treasurer is Ferris Stotler.

The Board of Directors will consist of the president, vice-president, treasurer, and Audrey Wolfe, Mac McCully, Jerry Spicher and Tomi Normandin, while Bill Farr holds the post of Junior Director.

The first meeting was graced by the presence of ETI President Art Martenson and Mrs. Martenson who made a special trip to the Monterey area to welcome the 46 members of the new corral. In his address, Martenson described how Equestrian Trails International has grown since its founding in Los Angeles just after the second World War into a well-organized group of considerable prestige and influence. ETI has been influential in obtaining trails and trail amenities, legislation favorable to horsemen on property and taxes, and also makes available to its members a highly desirable insurance.

However, the primary function of the individual corral is to sponsor trail rides and have a lot of fun together.

Trail Boss Mac McCully has outlined these mouth watering trail rides for Monterey Vaqueros during 1975:

Ride 1, January 18, 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. From Double A Stables on Aguajito Road up to Jacks' Peak for a panoramic view of the ocean and Carmel Valley. This is a good ride for inexperienced and young riders as there are no steep grades or narrow trails.

Ride 2 Saturday, Feb. 15. We will ride the Coast Ridge Road, which is a gentle upgrade for about four miles to where it levels off on top of the ridge. The views of ocean and forest are spectacular.

"Well, they told me I'd be on a picket line!"

Hatton Canyon Highway ten years off--if ever

By TOM LUECK

In the next decade, road construction may be extensive in the Carmel area.

One project has already been approved by the county in its five year road construction plan, and funded for the 1978-1979 fiscal year: Carmel Valley road will be expanded from two to four lanes for a total of 1.6 miles east of the point where it now narrows into a two lane road.

State officials have a bigger project in mind. The Hatton Canyon Freeway, which has been on drawing boards in San Luis Obispo and Sacramento since 1946 and has been subjected to both praise and damnation by officials in Carmel and Salinas, is now expected to be constructed in about 10 years.

The Hatton Canyon plan calls for a four lane roadway which, essentially, would create a by-pass to the existing two lane stretch of Highway 1 east of Carmel. It would cut off the highway just north of Carpenter Street, cut through Hatton Canyon and intersect the existing highway again at Carmel Valley Road.

Yet another and even bigger project remains in the county's planning portfolio. Originally proposed over 20 years ago, the Canada De La Segunda road would cut across completely undeveloped mountain land between the Carmel Valley and Del Rey Oaks. It would be engineered to cut off Carmel Valley road across from the Valley Hills Shopping Center and intersect Route 68 just east of the Monterey Peninsula Airport.

In December, the county board of supervisors voted against including the proposed road in its five year funding package. County officials now seem to agree that the plan will not become a reality in the near future. However, says County Public Works Director Bruce McClain, "it hasn't been dropped. The prospect isn't bright, but it's still a possibility."

Road development strikes at the heart of most vital issues facing the future of the Carmel and Carmel Valley area.

"The heart of the matter is growth," said Bruce Thompson, a staff planner with the Monterey County Transportation Study. "People are going to have to make decisions about how much growth there is going to be in the area. That will determine the amount of road construction."

Thompson's group, a half dozen professional planners working out of a small office in Salinas, has been commissioned to unravel the conflicts surrounding road construction. Constituted last year in a form not entirely different from that of the coastal commission, it is in the process of formulating a comprehensive county transportation plan which, in turn, will be submitted to Sacramento next year for inclusion in a statewide plan.

The group will adopt its plan for the county by April 1, 1975, and public hearings will be held at the end of February. It will address transportation needs for 20 years, and will incorporate analyses of a wide range of transportation modes. Airports, railroads, public transit, non-motorized modes and pipelines will be discussed in addition to highway development.

Considerable study has been given to those road construction projects proposed for the next decade. Traffic volumes on the Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1 have been documented, and projections (open growth projections) have been made.

The group has counted an average of 30,000 vehicle movements per day on Highway 1 just north of the Carpenter Street exit. That volume decreases to 27,000 just south of Ocean Avenue, and 15,000 south of Rio Road.

In 1995, provided the Hatton Canyon Freeway is built, vehicle movements per day on the existing two-lane stretch of Highway 1 are expected to decrease to 12,000.

The new four-lane facility through Hatton Canyon would, in 20 years, sustain a daily volume of 35,000 vehicles.

More dramatic increases in volume are predicted for Carmel Valley Road. Currently, at a point just east of the Del Mesa Carmel turnoff, the road sustains roughly 8,000 cars per day. By 1995, the study group predicts, it will be traveled by 26,000 vehicles per day.

That projected volume would be significantly affected if the Canada De La Segunda road were constructed. It would divert roughly 17,000 cars per day, and leave roughly 16,000 cars per day on the Carmel Valley Road.

But projections, Thompson concedes, "are just projections." Based upon the general plans of the various jurisdictions in the county, predictions of increased population are, at the very least, debatable.

Carmel, with a 1973 population of 5,166 is given a projected growth of 130 per cent over the next 20 years -- to 10,426 in 1995. The unincorporated areas of the county, with a population of 96,911 in 1973 are expected to reach 148,165 by 1995. On the whole, the county is given a projected growth of 61 per cent over the next 20 years.

However doubtful long range projections may be, the plan will make specific recommendations regarding highway development.

Construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway will be strongly recommended. In the view of Thompson, the plan may well include a recommendation that the four lane facility be constructed as soon as possible -- within the next ten years.

Henry Case, of the San Luis Obispo office of the department of transportation, was pessimistic about the prospect of state funding for the project before 1985. "Ten years is really the earliest, and it could be later than that with the way things are going," he said.

Case referred to "a great deal of controversy" which has been generated by the Hatton Canyon plan since its inception. He conceded that, with full support from the community, the project might move ahead more quickly.

"The state never rammed anything down anyone's throat," he said. "When we're working with limited funds, and we've got equally important projects planned in different areas, we will usually go ahead with the project we don't have to fight for."

"Now that might sound like a 'to hell with you' attitude," he continued, "but it's really not. We've found that projects are more successful all the way around when they are supported."

Controversy was first generated by the Hatton Canyon plan in the mid-fifties when Tom Hudson, at that time a member of the county board of supervisors, led a campaign against it. A number of community leaders, including Admiral C.W. Fischer (now deceased) were active in the opposition to the project.

Objections have been principally along environmental lines. Hatton Canyon is viewed as a particularly scenic area, and one which would not accommodate a four lane highway without a substantial "cut and fill" engineering operation.

In recent years however, Carmel officials have been more congenial to the proposal. Mayor Bernard Anderson has repeatedly expressed support for construction of the facility, and pointed to congested conditions on the existing two lane stretch of Highway 1 as one of the Carmel area's most pressing problems.

A transportation official in San Luis Obispo explained that his office has received "hundreds of letters" concerning the project over the last 20 years. He said, up until the last few years, most of those letters expressed objections to the plan.

Ride 3 Arroyo Seco to Strawberry, Saturday, March 22, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. On this ride a bridge about four feet wide and thirty feet long (a good sturdy bridge with high side rails) crosses about 40 feet above the Arroyo Seco River. Most horses will cross on their own--some have to be led. The trail climbs 1,800 feet under trees then to 2,700 feet in the open to Strawberry Valley. There are about 13 stream crossings on this ride.

Ride 4 Toro Park, Saturday April 19, 9:30 a.m. Meet at the Equestrian Area.

Ride 5 Coe State Park Saturday and Sunday, May 17 & 18. Coe State Park is located about 15 miles east of Morgan Hill. The last 10 miles of the road to the park are fairly steep so it takes pretty good equipment to negotiate. Water as well as food must be trucked in, so a committee will organize these two days of trail riding in beautiful hillside country.

Special Ride, May 24-26 Saturday to Monday. A round-up for the Marcus Rednick Cattle Co. At Hunter Liggett Military Reservation near King City.

Ride 6 Cowell State Park, Saturday, June 21, 10:00 a.m. Those who wish can meet for breakfast at Denny's in Santa Cruz at 8:30 a.m. before this redwood ride.

Ride 7, Saturday and Sunday, July 19 & 20. Los Padres and Big Sur to Camp Cienega. Only a great club would think up this goodie. Half the group will start from the Los Padres Dam at 7:00 a.m. and ride 18 miles to Camp Cienega. The other half of the group departs from Big Sur Ranger Station at 8:00 a.m. and rides 15 miles. There is a large corral with grazing at Camp Cienega, water and shade. At 10:00 a.m. Sunday morning, the groups exchange keys to their pickups and horse trailers and ride the other leg of the trip.

Ride 8, Saturday and Sunday, August 16 & 17, Los Padres Dam to Pine Valley. We will go up the Carmel River Trail which has some narrow spots overlooking a drop of 200 feet, but is really quite safe. There are also some 27 river crossings to make, but a good good ride with no severe climbs. Pine Valley is a beautiful large valley with ample water and a large corral with grazing.

Ride 9, Saturday, Sept. 18, Camp Escondido to Lost Valley. Camp Escondido is about 45 miles into the Los Padres from King City. Those who wish may go in on Friday and camp. The remainder may want to meet at Denny's in King City for breakfast about 6:00 a.m. on Saturday.

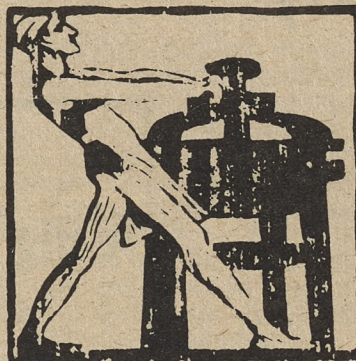

Ride 10 Saturday, October 17, Repeat of ride one.

Ride 11 Saturday, November 15, repeat of ride four.

Ride 12 Saturday, December 12, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. From Los Padres Dam we will ride the Blue Rock Ridge Trail which climbs narrowly and winding to 2,500 feet. Lunch at Big Pines then return making a round trip of about 16 miles.

Now clip this whole article out and tape it inside the cupboard door right next to your New Year's Resolutions. Of course you want to join these rides! Who wouldn't?

For starters, you might try calling Armand Normandin about the Jack's Peak ride on January 18th. Don't just show up unannounced, because someone has to tell you about trailer parking. The phone number at Double A stables is 375-4232.

11-year-old girl assaulted

Sheriff's detectives are seeking further information surrounding a sexual attack on an 11-year-old Carmel girl on her way home Monday evening.

The girl told investigators she was assaulted about 5:15 p.m. Monday near the Carmel Rancho Car Wash by a short man in his early 20s.

Detective Norm Snyder said the girl told authorities she was taking a shortcut toward the intersection of Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, when the suspect grabbed her hair after asking her the time and pulled her down a dirt trail.

Snyder said the assault was "attempted rape and sex perversion." When the girl tried to run away, the man grabbed her hair again and threatened to kill her.

The girl finally broke away from the man and ran to a nearby service station where she reported the assault, Snyder said. She was treated and released from Community Hospital.

Snyder said the suspect is 20 to 23 years old, 5 feet 3 inches to 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs about 125 pounds.

He has blonde hair, blue eyes and was reported wearing a green windbreaker and green trousers, with grease stains on his clothes. He may have had a thin mustache, the girl said.

Any information the public has concerning the assault is vital to the investigation, Snyder said, and asked that cooperative calls be placed to the main facility in Monterey at 375-2241.

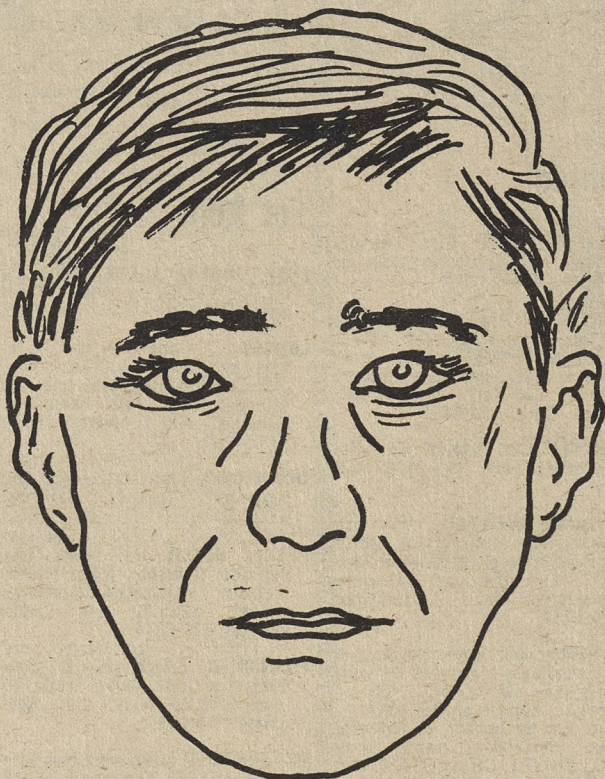

MPC SETS TWILIGHT CLASSES

Recognizing the difficulty many working people with families have in finding time to take college course for enjoyment or growth, Monterey Peninsula College is expanding its "Twilight College" offerings.

Vince Bradley, director of continuing education, said that more than 38 classes will be offered this spring to persons who have some "twilight time" to themselves and want to put it to good use. Twenty-seven such classes were offered in the fall, he noted.

Twilight College operates with classes that begin no earlier than 4 or 4:30 p.m. and end by 8 or 8:30 p.m. A number of classes fall within the 5 and 7 p.m. range.

Mail registration for Twilight College classes is now in progress and the deadline for applications is Jan. 15. After that date registration will be held Jan. 29-30-31 on campus.
